Bernié i deras blå jackor med guldsnören. — Det war wid denna Troupe som Du Bordieu war Major eller befullmgtigad Place Major, då han kom hit öfwer England i Febr. 1787; men han gick snart hem med Bar. Rajalin — och nu ha de ingen Major!

Capitine de Post har commando öfwer Triton och Gåpå samt bestyrer om deras förnödenheter, jämte inseendet öfwer alt hwad som angår hamnen. — Sysslan förrättades i början af Gouverneur Rajalin och i October 1786 fick Capitaine C. Letter from Jeremiah Tichon, Surgeon at Lyons in Auvergne, to the Editor of the Courrier de l'Europe.

The singular attitude of the Sieur Tichon, who now goes by the title of Count Caplain, added to my immediate necessity for money, obliges me to communicate to the public one of his adventures, which he has omitted to insert in his memoirs. You mentioned him in one of your numbers as a man of brutal character, who treats his wife cruelly. It is really surprising that the letters he received at Vienna, about the latter end of the year 1773, has not made a greater impression upon him. That day in the month of November, in that year, as he was walking with this unfortunate woman on the banks of the Danube, where the current rushed with the most rapid force, he took an opportunity to pick a quarrel with her upon one subject or another; and on her attempting to excuse or justify herself, he fell into a sudden rage and found her round the waist, threw her into the river, with such force, that she fell into the water above ten yards distant from the shore. Those who were spectators of this barbarous action wished in vain to give her assistance. The current carried her away with such rapidity, that she disappeared in a minute. Tichon was immediately taken into custody. Thirty witnesses appeared to prove the fact, and upon his testimony he was clearly convicted, and received sentence to be hanged. As feroceus of the prison, I had opportunity to see him. He appeared to me to be a stout well set masculine man, I thought him a good subject for dissection. I accordingly sent for the executioner, and struck a bargain with him for the corpse at the sum of fifty florins; which was double the usual price given for the bodies of ordinary malefactors. On the 28th of November, Tichon was hanged; and three or four hours after the execution, the body was brought to my house. I was then delivering a course of Lectures on Anatomy, and having placed the corpse on the amphitheatre, in the presence of
